Excerpt: . . . delivered and recorded, conveying said premises pursuant to such agreenient. (3 R. S. 9th ed. 2640.) By virtue of these provisions the plaintiff asserts that his assignor, who performed labor and furnished materials in moving and altering the dwelling upon the property under the contract with the vendee in possession, acquired a lien against the interest of the vendor. The vendee, Christina McNally, who contracted with the plaintiffs assignor, did not answer, and does not contest the claim of the plaintiff. Brid-get Slater, the vendor of the premises, alone defends and contests the right of the plaintiff to establish a lien upon her interest in the property. The provision above quoted from the 5th section of the Mechanics Lien Law did not provide for or embrace the case at bar. This provision was not intended to embrace, and does not embrace, the casein...
