The first I have no claim to, and the second I do not desire. One object is to relate a simple story of facts which are not generally known, and which, I think, cannot but be interesting to those who take the trouble to read it. But the principal object is to give the historian all opportunity of selecting such parts of it as he may think proper. I have often conversed with gentlemen of intelligence on the subject of the campaign of the North Western Army under the command of General Hull, in 1812, who appeared to possess but very little correct information relative to the transactions of that army. I am desirous that some one, more able, who possesses the necessary information should give a correct and detailed history of that campaign. The following narrative relates to one event, only, the particulars of which have never before been published. So little was said about it at the time, that the impression on the public mind, that such an event ever occurred, is nearly lost. The distance of the scene from the populous parts of the country, and the interruption to them, by the enemy, confined the intelligence of the engagement to the army, and to the few inhabitants of the territory...
