Its members will always be wisely elected; for a free people never err in the choice of their representatives. The short, the perhaps too short, period of its administration leaves no room for jealousy. The nature of their functions, which are foreign from the internal government of each particular state, forms a sufficient barrier to ambition. They never can conceive the design of usurping the sovereignty, or employing the forces of the confederation against the liberty of any single state. Its Powers to be Enlarged. Repose confidence, therefore, in the congress, and enlarge its powers. Be judged by the delegates of all your provinces; or in other words, be your own judges. Nothing will resist: the decisions of an impartial justice. Arm, however, your judges with such a power as cannot be dangerous; arm them with your whole strength to enforce their sentences. Thus will your decrees, pronounced by the lips of your judges, be executed by yourselves. No free man, undoubtedly, will ever think of entrusting mercenaries with the defence of that country, which has been dyed with your blood. The time, thank heaven! is now arrived, when patriotism will cease to be a hatred of human kind; when the prosperity of a free state will cease to be founded on the lust of empire, as it was at Rome, or on the love of war, as was the case at Sparta. But human nature is still the same....
