The licentious habits of the drunken Kalakaua and his Court were sufficiently disgusting to the whites, but their concern was seriously aroused when the King gave the place of Minister of Foreign Affairs to a crazy Italian, who bid fair to involve the country in political complications with other nations. The citizens in mass-meeting, which included the whites, the half-castes and the most intelligent of the natives, demanded the dismissal of the entire Cabinet, and the chicken-hearted King hastened to comply. This was in 1879 and with the progress of time the conditions of government grew steadily worse. In 1887 the subjects of Kalakaua were moved to make a vigorous popular protest, which had the avowed moral support of all the foreign representatives. A committee composed of prominent natives and resident whites was deputed to wait upon the debased King who had ere this become a physical and mental wreck. The committee submitted a draft of a new constitution to which the signature of Kalakaua was THE NEW CONSTITUTION. 279 demanded within twenty-four hours. The King, who still had sufficient sense left to him to realize his unpopularity and the probable results of refusal, signed the document. Amongst those who carried out this coup, there were many in favor of abolishing the monarchy and setting up a republic, but conservative councils prevailed against the...
