Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Hidden Treasures, or Martha s Triumph: A Drama in a Prologue and Four Acts Mark. I wonder how this is going to end. I feel a little nervous about it, but I must shake off that kind of feeling. My mind is made up, I am determined to get possession of Joe Stone s property. I know he has got it, and I don t see the use of his hoarding it up. His mine turns out very well. I can get no work-but I m not particular about that, for I don t like to feel obliged to work continually and earn only a little at a time. But I must have money and I don t know of any easier way to get it than to take that. I may not succeed but if he will not tell me where it is, why, - I shall be obliged to get rid of him, then I can search for it myself, without any interruption from him. There is no one else has any claim on it except his little girl, and she is too youDg to think much of it now; so I will risk it any way. I ll see him to-night, that i3 what I am here for, and if it comes to blows, to save trouble I will leave this place for a time, uutil it is all forgotten. Now I ll go and wait for him down tbe road, tis most time he was here.(exit l. u. s. Enter Susan, r. 1 e. Susan. I declare I am so tired I don t know what to do. I have...
