Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Michelle Trop was born on June 2, 1938 in Orleanais, France. Her parents, Sonia and Jacob Trop, moved to southern France from Poland in 1936. Their families lived in Poland for many generations. Jacob s father, his grandfather, and all his uncles had been bakers there. Although Jacob made a living in Orleanais as a plumber, Michelle fondly remembered the wonderful jelly roll made for Rosh Hashanah each year after the war. Restrictions were placed on the lives of Jews in Poland. Riots reflected growing anti-semitism, and when Hitler took over Germany, they heard about horrible things happening to Jews. When they moved to France, they thought they would be avoiding these problems. In the early 1930s, two of Sonia s aunts emigrated from Poland to the United States with their families in order to escape persecution. Between 1936 and 1939, life for the Trop family in Orleanais was happy. Jacob s business was going well, and Sonia enjoyed caring for baby Michelle. German troops invaded Poland in the fall of 1939. Britain and France declared war on Germany. Jacob was concerned that France would fall under Nazi rule. The possibility of being sent to a concentration camp or being killed outright was real. He joined the French resistance and arranged for Sonia and baby Michelle to live with a Catholic family on a remote farm in the French countryside. Michelle was only one year old when she arrived at the farm with her mother. They remained on the farm for the next six years. The farmer s wife treated them as family. She told Nazi soldiers that both husbands were away fighting in...
