Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from My Connection With the Atlas Newspaper: Including a Sketch of the History of the Amory Hall Party of 1838, and an Account of the Senatorial and Representative Elections in the City of Boston for the Year 1839, So Far as the Question of Sustaining the License Law of 1838 Was Involved Therein I was partially induced to adopt this course, in consequence of Mr. Haughton s determination to bring forward and sustain Mr. Webster as the Whig presidential candidate, a procedure in the policy of which I did not concur. It was at this time that the paper was enlarged, to the eight dollar size, it having previously been a five dollar paper; and Mr. John O. Sargent, now in the New York Courier and Enquirer, was announced in its columns, as associate editor. Before going any farther, I here claim the liberty of making a few observations upon my contributions to the Atlas, during this, my first period of connection with it. Almost all the leading editorial articles were written by myself: They were for the most part short and pointed. Either from their spirit and vivacity, or for some other cause, they were very generally copied by our exchange papers, and I soon enjoyed the satisfaction - and to so young a writer, it was a satisfaction - of seeing my own articles coming back from the banks of the Ohio and Mississippi where they had been reprinted. At the time the Atlas began to be published, the affairs of the Whig party had fallen into great confusion. In 1831, the Anti-masons had first. appeared in this Commonwealth, as a distinct political party....
