The Grassmarket, Cowgate and the Kings Park. Ok this tour Out rendezvous is in front of the Caledonian J. Railway Station, at the west end of Princes Street. Our first point of interest lies immediately opposite in the West Kirk, or St. Cuthbert s. The history of the church goes hack further than that of any other religious institution in Scotland. The site was occupied by a church as early as the eighth century, and was dedicated to St. Cuthbert, Bishop of Durham, who died May 20, 687. Its history prior to the Reformation is involved in obscurity, but a detailed record exists of all its incumbents since that event. Many of them were men of great note in their day, such as Robert Pont David Williamson, Charles McVicar, and Sir Henry Moncrieff. The parish was at one time so large that in 1835 it measured five miles in length and three and a half in breadth. At that date the present day quoad sacra parishes of Buccleuch, St. Bernard s, Newington, and Roxburgh were all included in it. The present building was erected in 1775, but was altered and modernised a few years ago. In the burying-ground of St. Cuthbert s are interred many distinguished men, among others Thomas de Quincey, the English Opium Eater, in some respects the greatest master of English prose that...
