Excerpt: . . . 11 OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR AKAKA KAKA Senator A. Yes, Mr. Chairman. I wish to thank you very much for having this hearing and for the opportunity to sit with you and the Subcommittee as you continue this series of hearings on the Federal workforce. As the Ranking Member of the Federal Services Subcommittee, I have an obvious interest in how the gov-ernment empowers its employees to meet the challenges of the 21st Century. As the Chairman and our distinguished panelists know, the Fed-eral Government is at a human resources crossroads due to downsizing, contracting out, flattened budgets, emerging tech-nologies, and an historically low unemployment rate. Although training programs are critical to skills development, Federal agen-cies were forced to cut back on training in the past decade. There are hopeful signs, however, of a renewed emphasis on training by the issuance of...
